Multiplayer control screens: Singleplayer control screens: Videos: Each weapon costs 3 guns and you get a third randomly each round, so you normally have two shots and one special attack. You can use your special for 1.5x damage, but a lot of the damage comes from the special attack, where you get an extra hit. A lot of the gameplay occurs when different items are spawned. Instead of exploding, these items obstruct enemy movement (and shoot anything that comes into contact with them - which is most stuff, even you). If they collide with you, you lose a life. That means a big part of your strategy is figuring out what to pop when you get hit and when (like my special, where I only get one chance to use it). You also need to consider the best place to take cover and if you should move into the open or stay behind something... You see how important cover is? You also have to watch for items. Having a slow round and not being able to score enough points means you have to go back and do it again. Without a doubt, this game is the hardest game on any sort of console. Well, as hard as a game can be. Surprisingly, it can also be the most fun. This game is a blast, but you have to put your brains on the line. You cannot make a bunch of smart moves and expect to win without taking some risk. You see how much fun this game is? It's because that's exactly what it is. You're playing a crazy, blood-pumping action game. You're challenging your friends with your sharp-shootin' skill. You're having a blast and its all because this game is such a blast. Do you like Janky Tanks? Well, do you like games that are fun and original at the same time? I guess that kinda describes this game. If you like games with a lot of character, then you'll love Janky Tanks - because this game has all the charm and characters of the games it's trying to be. I guess you could make an argument that this game is a cross between Jagged Alliance and Hot Shots, but its still unique. What you

Album Blasted Fortress Official Soundtrack Album is a soundtrack album by progressive rock band Porcupine Tree, released on 6 October 2008. Musical style and themes Unlike the band's previous album, The Incident, which featured upbeat tunes with chillout moments, the soundtrack album is dark, with intense, noise-rock soundscapes. All tracks are lesser known and recorded between 1993 and 2004 when the band released their third, fourth and fifth albums. It features 8 tracks, two remixes, and a DVD on the cover. Tracks 1 to 4 and 10 to 12 were featured in the 2008 film The Boat. Tracks 1 to 4 and 8 were featured in the 2010 film Proxima. Reception Reception from professional media was generally favourable. Some critics praised the album's use of 'industrial' sounds, which are unavailable on most soundtracks, and particularly praised the inclusion of "Existence Is Now / In the Absence of Light" as one of the album's high points. "Existence Is Now" was most notably featured as the theme song to the 11th season of the television show, Bones, which aired from September to November 2012, and is used to book-end each episode. The soundtrack was released to very positive reviews, such as 3:AMs John Aizlewood (who gave the soundtrack an 8.5/10 rating and commented "Blasted Fortress is one of the finest Porcupine Tree albums yet") and Gavin Mueller, the editor of the 2009 edition of Dusted magazine, who gave the soundtrack a positive review for "revealing all of the band's creativity to not just new audiences, but longtime fans as well". In a more mixed review, Melodic.net said that in terms of composition and production, the album is "equal parts dark and beautiful." The review continued to say that the album is "more than worthy of a listen," but also commented that "it's not exactly a masterpiece." Classic Rock gave the album a less favourable review, giving the album a 4 out of a 5 rating. The review noted the song "A Worker on a Shingle" is "absolutely magnificent," and rated the album one of the "Top Albums of 2008", but commented that the closing track, "In the Absence of Light", is "pretty damn depressing." Catechin accumulation and antioxidant enzyme activities in leaves of an oak acorn crop tree affected by the white-rot fungus Tomentella lotidis. In oak acorn crop trees, leaves present during the fall and winter display a distinct hypostomatous pattern. The hypostomatic leaves are rich in natural polyphenols such as flavonoids and condensed tannins. The in vitro data showed that the hypostomatic leaves are also rich in antioxidant enzymes. To investigate whether these two factors are correlated at the in situ level, we studied the relationship between condensed tannins and antioxidant enzyme activities in leaves that were in the process of hardening in a Bocasuenae oak acorn crop tree after inoculation of the trunk with the white-rot fungus Tomentella lotidis. Leaves were sampled at different times after the onset of the hypostomatic pattern. Leaves from non-inoculated trees were taken as controls. Condensed tannins and antioxidant enzyme activities were determined in the leaves. The data showed that condensed tannins were unaffected by inoculation with T. lotidis, but that antioxidant enzyme activities were rapidly induced during hypostomatic pattern formation. Leaf constituents were extracted and analysed by high performance liquid chromatography and nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy. These showed that
