Steps Method1 Using Photoshop 1 Open Photoshop. There are many ways to open Photoshop. You can simply drag the icon for Photoshop from the dock or from another program to the Photoshop window. You can also choose to open Photoshop from another program by choosing Edit⇒Preferences⇒Applications⇒ Photoshop (Mac) or File⇒Open (Windows). 2 Make an image by pressing CMD+N (Mac) or CTRL+N (Windows). For Mac users, there is an icon for Photoshop in the dock. You can double-click on this to start Photoshop. You can start Photoshop from any other application by going to its icon in the dock and pressing CMD+N (Mac) or CTRL+N (Windows). 3 Create a new document. If you do not have a new document in the Photoshop window, do it now by either choosing File⇒New (Mac) or File⇒New (Windows) or press CMD+N (Mac) or CTRL+N (Windows). 4 Select the desired tool. To choose a tool, do one of the following: Use the tool with the keyboard shortcut CMD+T (Mac) or CTRL+T (Windows). Do a screen-select with the mouse. Click on the tool (cursor) tool. Photoshop will fill the canvas with the tool. 5 Click and drag to make the tools act on the image. Drag a tool on the canvas by clicking the desired tool and moving it around the canvas. If you want to make several tools act on the image, press CTRL+J (Mac) or CTRL+H (Windows) and then drag the tool. As you drag the tool, Photoshop will fill the canvas with it. 6 Put an eraser on the tools, and remove the image. While you are dragging the tools around the canvas, press E (Mac) or CTRL+E (Windows) to make a soft eraser. This will erase the portion of the canvas that the tool is on, and will leave the other portions untouched. 7 Press CMD+Z (Mac) or CTRL+Z (Windows) to undo the tools that you just made. 8 Edit the image. While you were using the tools, the background image in the image will change. If you want to edit it

Field of the Invention This invention is in the field of door locks. Description of Related Art Door locks typically have a latch that requires a user to push a latch or knob in a direction to unlock the door. In some locks, the latch is in a down position when not engaged with the door, so that when a user pushes the latch or knob in an unlock direction, the latch moves from the down position to an up position. An example of a door latch with such a down-to-up action is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 7,123,397 to Kagan ("Kagan"). Another example of a door latch with such a down-to-up action is disclosed in U.S. Patent Application No. 20130298535 to Kagan ("Kagan"). Kagan discloses a latch having an actuator and a frame. The actuator includes a baulk having a top surface and a bottom surface. The bottom surface of the baulk has a protrusion that extends from the bottom surface of the baulk. The frame includes two elongate portions and a fulcrum portion. The fulcrum portion is disposed in an opening in the top surface of the baulk. The elongate portions of the frame are disposed in the bottom surface of the baulk. The baulk and the frame portions cooperatively form a cavity between the top surface of the baulk and the bottom surface of the baulk that defines the bottom surface of the latch. The cavity is large enough to receive and hold an elongate lock bolt. The lock bolt is disposed within the cavity between the top surface of the baulk and the bottom surface of the baulk. The protrusion of the bottom surface of the baulk is engaged by the top surface of the elongate portions of the frame as the baulk moves away from the frame. The latch is disposed in a down position when the lock bolt is extended and can be engaged with a bolt receiver in a door. When the user pushes the latch in an unlock direction, the latch moves from the down position to an up position and the protrusion of the bottom surface of the baulk first contacts the top surface of the elongate portions of the frame, thereby pulling the top surface of the baulk away from the bottom surface of the baulk. As a result, the elongate portions of the frame
